Questions or Comments?

Please, please do not use the red barn area for parking or access. I'm a retired ER doctor and have lived here 46 years, and that spot is notorious for vehicular accidents, especially motorcycles. I cannot imagine horse trailers pulling in and out with people zipping around that corner. And a parking lot there would be an aesthetic tragedy, ruining such a pretty spot. And, speaking of aesthetics, please restore the red color to the red barn. That washed out rust look has never been attractive.

Thanks for keeping the open spaces open and natural

Questions or Comments?

I do not like the idea of creating a redundant new parking lot at "the residence site" on Harrington Creek trail.

- The One mile ranch road is a popular brief walk and jog road after work on week days. Don't want to hike from one lot to another.

- Having a lot one mile in doesn't provide much more access which was a goal.

- I just hiked from Folger Loop trail down Harrington Creek Trail towards Sears Ranch Road and realized I'd be staring at a parking lot as I wind down the trail from above. Not very inspiring. It would be an eyesore.

- Driscoll was an event center, the space is ideal for large groups and can accommodate limited mobility groups and small children. Good spot for small loop, picnic area, and interpretive or visitor center.

- Leave Weeks Creek LH07 to the wildlife. Humans and dogs would disrupt.

Consider connecting Allen Road trail to Harrington. Trail the group hiked from "residence site" to the right and up to the gate could veer left or North away from weeks creek and connect to Allen Road by trails that by pass Red Barn. Leave the Red Barn on its own. Humans don't need to hike to it. Hikers want to hide. Those that don't or can't can go to Driscoll. Leave Red Barn as icon it is undisturbed.

Thanks,

Only three comments have been included since the Red Barn meeting in June 2018. All were comments, not questions.

Let me know if you need any further information.

Just realized that if some adds a comment on the La Honda email list web sign-up that these comments are still being sent to Leslie Chan. I'll change that to forward to the two of you and look back to see what might have been missed.
